Dear Friend,

Now that the sun is shining, the warm weather has arrived, and flowers are springing up in the garden, it's time to think about introducing the three "Rs" into your homeschool—Renew, Refresh, and Relax! How can you renew your kids' passion for learning, refresh your curriculum, and find creative ways to relax with your family?

- ◆ Take your homeschool outdoors for hands-on lessons in science and nature. View the astonishing world of amoebas, parameciums, and spirogyra living in your local pond with the help of Nature's Workshop Plus! Lab Equipment. Or discover the majestic beauty of the night sky with Apologia's Exploring Creation with Astronomy (both on page 63). And reinforce learning by encouraging your students to record their findings in My Nature Journal (page A26).
- ◆ Keep your kids engaged by introducing new resources into your lesson plan, such as the bundle kits from Modern Curriculum Press (front cover & page 26); A.C.E. PACes (pages 8 & 9); updated materials from BJU Press (pages 10–14); the WWII and Law & Government kits from Vision Forum (page 17); the composition curriculum WriteShop (page 45); and online programs like Destination Math (page 55) and TenMarks (page 56).
- ◆ And be sure to schedule some down time when you and your children can unwind while listening to Your Story Hour (page 35), reading the Dover Classics (page 46), or playing fun games like Bananagrams and Dutch Blitz (page 50).

CBD Alpha Omega's Switched-On Schoolhouse 2012

Committed to providing your children with the best in biblically based education, Alpha Omega offers a wide range of affordably priced materials that can be adapted to your students' individual needs and learning styles.

Switched-On Schoolhouse, a self-paced, customizable program for grades 3 to 12, uses multimedia presentations to illustrate concepts and reinforce learning. LIFEPAK, the award-winning K to 12 curriculum, is composed of consumable work-

And the Weaver Curriculum, a Bible-based unit study, allows you to teach the same topic to all students but includes assignments geared to specific grade levels.

Consumer Math

Do your students wonder when they'll ever use "math stuff"? Show them with this supplementary course that explores practical mathematical applications. Welcome to Accelerated Christian Education's (A.C.E.) School of Tomorrow! For more than 40 years, A.C.E. has helped homeschool students achieve academic excellence through self-instructional, biblically based worktexts called PACEs. Each PACE is equivalent to a textbook chapter and integrates godly character-building lessons with educational content. Students take responsibility for their own learning by completing 12 PACEs for each subject in their grade level. Checkups reveal areas for improvement; self- and final tests objectively measure students' mastery of the material; and score keys provide answers to test questions. Individualized, flexible, and comprehensive, A.C.E. curriculums have a proven track record for providing homeschool students with a quality education.

Complete PACE Grade Kits

Educating your children just got easier with these all-in-one kits! Designed to integrate character-building and critical-thinking lessons with mastery of academic content, PACEs offer your children a curriculum of clearly defined goals and expectations. Vocabulary development is controlled so that no word is used without the student first learning its meaning. Full-color explanations, illustrations, and innovative activities reinforce text material. Hands-on social studies and science projects allow students to apply what they've learned. Checkups reveal weaknesses; and self-tests help pupils determine their own readiness for final exams. Kits include PACE worktexts only. Score keys and items such as supplemental books, CDs, and DVDs are available separately. See the A.C.E. curriculum chart to select the resources you need for your homeschool.

Creation to the Resurrection, Volume 1: The Mystery of History Series, Second Edition

Linda Lacour Hobar

I can still remember the day when my high school history teacher called a young lady to the front of the class to find Egypt on the big wall map . . . of South America! Flustered, she finally gave up and returned to her seat amidst the laughter of the other students. She just couldn’t “get it” and, like so many of us, probably grew up thinking history was tedious or dull. Well, it’s never too late to form new opinions as we learn along with our children.

The Mystery of History is a chronological study of God’s intervention in human events from creation to the resurrection. The heart of this course is a well-researched and lively text ideally suited to be read aloud and discussed. Timeline projects, study questions, vocabulary, maps, quizzes, tests, and numerous activities for a broad range of ages are included. Bite-sized weekly lessons cover the entire school calendar. Students will learn who walked the earth when and what was going on in other parts of the world at the same time as major biblical events. Some amazing and fun facts are thrown in just to keep us on our toes. Additionally, this book shows that studying history reveals a beautiful picture of God’s sovereignty in which there is never a “dull” moment. Grades 4 to 8; adaptable for older or younger students. 672 pages, softcover.

A Review by Karen Andreola

Foundations of Character, Homeschool Edition: Drive Thru History America—DVD Curriculum

I'll be honest with you. When we watched Drive Thru History, I thought, "These do teach interesting Christian truths not unearthed in the typical history course, and I did laugh at the humor, but at the same time the fast-paced style was rather flashy for my (midlife, feminine) tastes." Dean, however, found it all fascinating. (Perhaps it's a masculine thing.) Then came Drive Thru History America—a subject closer to my heart. When I watched it, one biography at a time, I found each segment to be just as fast-paced and entertaining, but somehow less flashy and, best of all, satisfyingly meaty. I say "meaty" because I learned details I hadn't come across in 20 years of homeschooling. Therefore, this time, I'm writing the review.

David Barton examines famous Americans for their contribution to our country and, most importantly, an outstanding virtue in their character that empowered them. Meet George Washington, Ben Franklin, John Quincy Adams, Abigail Adams, Benjamin Rush, Noah Webster, and others. What better way to gain enthusiasm for learning history than to be inspired by the characteristics of particular men and women? Nine DVD-ROM presentations are supported by nine lessons in the accompanying 125-page book. Each chapter has a reproducible work-page with a few pointed questions. Because of its concentrated themes and entertaining information, this curriculum kit would be well suited for a co-op setting or a family of combined ages. Appropriate for middle school to high school students, but younger ones could join in, too. Teacher's guide on disk.

"Every age has its defining crisis," states Vision Forum president Douglas Phillips. "The defining crisis of our age is the systematic annihilation of the biblical family." Seeking to restore a Christian family culture—fathers as leaders, providers, and "God-ordained vision communicators"; mothers as lovers of children and "keepers at home"—the folks at Vision Forum have set out to publish a multigenerational library of works emphasizing family renewal, child discipleship, biblical patriarchy, godly education, Christ-centered apologetics, righteous government, and the providential hand of God in history for training tomorrow's men and women. Jonathan Park Audio Adventures on CD

These audio adventures are the most informative ones I have ever heard. The main characters are creation scientists who try to convince people that evolution is scientifically impossible by showing evidence that supports biblical creation. The programs are relatively similar to Adventures in Odyssey in style—funny and a bit corny at times—but are packed with Bible-centered moral lessons. The adventures (although rather unlikely) are very exciting and provide hours of entertainment for the whole family. There are explosions for the boys, horse-riding trips for the girls, and stressful employment experiences and faith-building catastrophes for parents and grandparents alike! I really enjoyed listening to these stories while painting at the kitchen table. Each Creation Audio Adventures set is over 5 hours long, with 12 episodes on four CDs.

Streams of Civilization, Volume 1

Mary Stanton & Albert Hyma

Streams of Civilization has been used by homeschoolers and Christian schools for a long time, and with good reason. It is still one of the few world history texts that combines a biblical worldview, creation science, and church history. It does not shy away from the positive contributions made by Christians throughout the centuries. Students will acquire an understanding of the scope of human events from the creation of man to current news headlines. Major world cultures, religions, and their development are explained with the aid of maps, timelines, and graphics. As this is an overview of civilization, I recommend using it alongside biographies, films, historical fiction novels, picture books, etc. Have students keep a notebook of their personal impressions and summaries. Encourage them to share verbally what they are learning. This makes good supper conversation, and helps them remember and apply what they are reading!

A Review by Dean Andreola

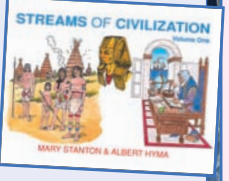

If history is destined to repeat itself when we do not learn from its lessons, then this is one valuable course of study for our future generation. Volume 1 covers up to A.D. 1600. Volume 2 covers the Reformation through the beginning of the 21st century. Ages 14 and up. 410 pages, hardcover. (Note: Karen says the teacher's guide was written for the classroom. It requires much busy-work of the teacher, which needn't be necessary in the home setting, so use it only sparingly, if at all.)

Christian Liberty Nature Readers

When I purchase books for our homeschool, they don't always end up to be books that have glossy full-color pictures. Sometimes they are the more humble-looking ones. But very often, humble though they may appear, they possess a writing style capable of drawing younger students into reading their assignments with satisfaction and enjoyment. Nature Readers are just this sort of book.

For example, in Nature Reader, Book 3 (average third grade reading level), a fisherman tells stories about Old King Crab, Mr. Barnacle and his son, and the flowers of the sea, which are all really animals. At the end of one chapter, describing the business of ants, the author writes, "This seems like a fairy tale, but it is quite true. All these things can be seen if you look out for them." Some questions in these readers give the student the opportunity for little tellings (narration). These are the type of prompts: Describe a barnacle fishing party. What can you tell me about giant beetles? Why is it so hard to pull a worm out of its hole? How do ants treat each other while they are at work? Nature Reader, Book 4 has more creatures. The author shares surprising observations of baby hummingbird activity. Nature Reader, Book 5 describes

Exploring America, Second Edition—Curriculum Package

My son's college English professor bragged that she also taught American history without war or religion! Modern education strives to rob our children of God, His values, and the desire to defend what they hold to be true. Ray Notgrass has the antidote to this trend. Using a 3-tier approach—History, English Literature/Composition, and Bible—he challenges students to see and question the unfolding of historical events through the eyes of faith.

A Review by Dean Andreola

Names and dates are important. But history is better understood and more apt to be remembered within the context of ideas. What were the newsmakers of yesteryear thinking and reading? What were the popular stories of the day? The 409-page bonus softcover, American Voices, places some of the time's most decisive documents, speeches, essays, hymns, poems, short stories, and biographical sketches right at your student's fingertips.

Mr. Notgrass's poignant text in the student books delves deeply into cause-and-effect influences with special emphasis on the ethical and spiritual consequences of law, war, slavery, economy, education, culture, and much more. For English, students are immersed in redemptive period literature like Little Women, The Life of David Crockett, Up from Slavery, and Christy. The Bible lessons bring high schoolers' worldview to maturity, allowing them to see the significance of faith in America, develop well-reasoned opinions, and boldly bear the mark of their Maker. This course respects the historical values of the Protestant Reformation.

This course is reading-intensive coupled with research and writing assignments, with the goal of securing knowledge. Quizzes and tests in the Exam Pack are therefore optional. The teacher's notes include a variety of ways the content can be used to meet your needs and credit requirements. This program can be used as a stand-alone history class or as a full year unit study for three subjects. 830 pages total, two softcovers.

Memoria Press founder Cheryl Lowe became aware of the critical role Latin grammar plays in intellectual development when she homeschooled her sons over 20 years ago. After incorporating the language into their curriculum, she began offering classes to the local Louisville, Kentucky, homeschool community. The next logical step was to make the material available for others to use. Her company has now become one of the premier developers and sources of classical education materials in the United States, shipping the popular Latina Christiana curriculum and other courses of study worldwide.

Latina Christiana 1—DVD Set

Salvete! Caesar is dead and Rome has fallen, but Latin is very much alive on Leigh Lowe's Prima Latina and Latina Christiana DVDs. They are especially designed for parents and students with no background in Latin. (Isn't that just about everybody?) Although Latin was phased out of most schools back in the mid-'70s, it is making a startling comeback, thanks to the classical studies in the Trivium. Since over half of our English vocabulary comes from Latin, students who study it can develop a richer understanding of modern-day words and concepts, improve their thinking skills, and foster a greater appreciation for the history, theology, and music of the early church—the very roots of our Christian heritage.

Here's how the Prima and Latina DVDs work. Students are asked to simply review the lesson in the text; watch the same lesson on DVD; then complete the written exercises. Our onscreen teacher, Mrs. Lowe, is enthusiastic, warm, and engaging. Students will find themselves repeating phrases and answering her questions aloud with no prompting from Mom or Dad. Each set contains 25 lessons on DVD to go along with the teacher and student workbook of the same level. Prima (9 hours on three DVDs) is recommended for first to fourth graders as an early introduction. Older students of all ages will enjoy Latina Christiana (17 hours on four DVDs).

SAVE $7

Each DVD set covers parts of speech, tenses, grammar, vocabulary, numbers, and lines from prayers. Latina Christiana expands lessons with more vocabulary, and even adds songs, Roman history, games, and pronunciation CDs. Lesson plans, tests, and keys are in the teacher's manual. Handy flash cards are also available.

A Review by Dean Andreola

This is a fantastic course for the little scholars in your home, and practical as well. On the way home from church, Nigel and I were listening to a beautiful requiem on the car radio. I was surprised that I could understand so much of it from the early lessons of Latina Christiana. Deo Gratias!

Rosetta Stone French, Level 1

I am the only one in my family who has not studied French. So it seemed fitting that I should review Rosetta Stone, putting myself in the same category as a new French student. What a surprise! Within minutes of loading the program onto my computer, I was headlong into my first interactive lesson—and scoring well to boot! Within the hour, I was easily recognizing written and spoken words and matching them to beautiful full-color photographs. Then I moved on to pronunciation, comparing my voice patterns and inflections with a native speaker, as shown by a meter and pattern graph. After a few tries, the meter rose from red to green. I was not only getting it, I was having fun! Nigel entered the room and said, "Dad, let me try!" "Later, Nigel," I replied.

Rosetta Stone teaches language the same way we learned our first language: direct association with words, written and spoken, and with objects, actions, and ideas that convey meaning, so no tedious translation is necessary. Each lesson builds on foundations previously laid, so there is always much to recognize, not memorize. And I like that, not being very astute at memorization myself. It seemed to me that Rosetta Stone was actually helping me to "think" in French! Even grammar usage and vocabulary are taught through real-life examples, with plenty of opportunities to use them. When I skipped ahead to the end of the program, I was still getting some correct answers because I was able to recognize root words from the earlier lessons.

Listening, reading, speaking, and writing are covered using CD-ROMs of hundreds of hours of creative and inviting lessons, along with a printed study guide assisting in basic grammar, usage, and new vocabulary. A parent's guide and student management/tracking system (if desired for one or more students) complete the package. Spanish program also includes the student workbook and tests with answer keys in PDF versions for printing.

This course has received rave reviews from many sectors—from homeschoolers and computer companies, to members of the U.S. State Department! Level 1 alone is equivalent to a year of high school study, yet can be used by much younger students. But more importantly, Rosetta Stone students are simply more comfortable with listening and speaking the language. What more could you ask for? Includes headset microphone and Audio/MP3 Companion CDs for lesson reinforcement. (Note: Due to publisher update, you'll receive either audio CDs or MP3s. MP3s will not play in an audio-only CD player.) 96MB RAM; Windows 95/98/00/ME/XP, Macintosh 8.1 or higher.

Spectrum Test Prep & Practice

Do you remember taking standardized tests ... filling in those little dots with your No. 2 lead pencil for what seemed like an eternity? Maybe you remember wasting precious time on "trick" questions that seemed to make no sense! All this so we could be classified and cataloged. We home teachers prefer to impart a lifelong love of knowledge that rises above immediate test scores and grades. We create our homeschool from materials we choose, not those preselected for us by officials. If, however, your state requires your student's participation in standardized testing, don't allow these tests to become a source of worry. In just a few sessions per week, Spectrum Test Prep and Test Practice can defuse the anxiety often associated with standardized testing.

The introductory Test Prep series reveals what students are expected to know for each subject area based on national standards. In each workbook, students are given problems to solve, along with examples, practice tests, and clues to sharpen their skills and build their confidence before taking a mini-test. Each mini-test is followed by "How Am I Doing?" for evaluation and review if needed. The book concludes with a final exam.

The Test Practice series offers lengthier sample and practice tests using "fill in the dot" answer sheets. These books further hone test-taking skills and build endurance for the marathon day of testing.

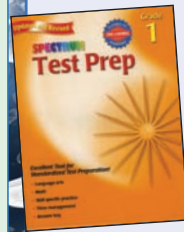

Both series offer perforated and reproducible pages of the types of questions found on actual national and state tests. Students are encouraged to practice with a subject area as many times as needed. Grades 1 and 2 cover Language Arts and Math; grades 3 through 8 add Science and Social Studies to the mix. Guided instructions, test clues, and answer keys are included. Children love surprises, but not on test day! Help them be well-prepared. Approx. 120-160 pages each, softcovers from School Specialty.

Wordly Wise 3000 Series

Kenneth Hodkinson & Sandra Adams

What better way to learn vocabulary than by reading, writing, and using words? This popular series selects 3,000 words from literature, textbooks, and SAT-prep books to create lessons. Word lists include parts of speech and definitions, and present each word in a sentence. Challenging exercises require students to find and apply meanings, and analyze sentences and narratives. Include engaging word histories, helpful information on avoiding common usage pitfalls, mnemonic devices, and fun puzzles for reviewing previous lessons. As your students learn to work with dictionary-style word lists, identify contextual and syntactic clues, discern and apply multiple meanings, and use Greek and Latin roots to develop comprehension strategies, their vocabulary will grow by leaps and bounds! Grades 2 to 12. Approx. 165 to 200 pages each, softcovers.

Maps, Charts & Graphs Series

Oops, I almost omitted map work with Nigel entirely until I took notice of this series. His sisters each completed one book years back; now it was Nigel's turn.

A Review by Karen Andreola

Sometime in a child's education it is good to familiarize him with the skill of understanding how to read maps, diagrams, charts, and graphs, and the colorful pages of these books do a superb job of providing an interesting sampling of activities. If, like me, you are not particularly fond of worktexts, you'll be glad to find that no teacher's guide is needed; the answers are in the back. The lessons can be done once a week or so, offer a good variety of forms and topics, and are short and pertinent.

The books progress in difficulty. For example: Levels A & B (for early elementary) have 21 lessons; D has 30; Levels G & H have 42 lessons. If you only have room for one course, I recommend G for a teen. Approx. 50 to 90 pages each, softcovers.

Charlotte Mason Recommendations from the Andreolas

Dear Friends,

Thankfully, the teachings of 19th-century British educator Charlotte Mason have been rediscovered in modern times. Karen and I returned from England in 1987 with Miss Mason's writings in our suitcase, and soon after, we republished them. Home-schoolers began eagerly applying her Christian principles for living and learning. Parents and children readily took to "living books," narration, nature study, and good literature. Success stories came to us from all over the country. A movement was born. When Karen wrote her beautiful Charlotte Mason Companion, she placed these practical principles within easy reach of every homeschool mom. Our recommendations on this page and throughout this catalog are meant to foster that same ideal of a lifelong love of learning in your children, too!

Pocketful of Pinecones: Nature Study with the Gentle Art of Learning

Karen Andreola

I wrote this story for a mom like you. Carol, a 1930s homemaker, loves her husband, home teaches, cooks healthy meals, and understands "make-do and mend" frugality. Interested in Charlotte Mason's ideas, she takes nature walks with her children and guides them in creating their own nature notebooks. Throughout the four seasons, they observe more than 200 living things together. Pinecones is a kind of teacher's guide in the form of a soothing and uplifting story. 272 pages, softcover from Charlotte Mason Research.—Karen

Favorite Poems Old and New

Compiled by Helen Ferris

Charlotte Mason liked each day to have a poem in it. It might be a new poem or a poem that is repeated for memorization. This book's Biblical Psalms and 700 other poems supply a treasure-trove of verses for adorning history notebooks and nature diaries or for celebrating seasons and holidays. I wore out the spine of our copy. It is the poetry book I opened more than any other during the elementary years.

The Original Home Schooling Series, 6 Volumes

Charlotte M. Mason

Charlotte Mason's writings reflect a lifetime of experience teaching children and training teachers. Her topics are meaty. Her ideas radiate brilliantly in the thoughts of those who take the time to ponder them. With each suggestion comes a practical "how to" direction for bringing up children within an educational lifestyle. The power of attention, moral character, the discipline of habit, and safeguarding a child's curiosity are some of the subjects presented. Although Miss Mason began writing in the 1880s, parents are seeing how wonderfully her principles work in today's homeschools. Slipcased softcovers, from Charlotte Mason Research.

Exploring Economics Set with Quiz & Exam Pack

A Review by Dean Andreola

Exploring Economics prepares high school students to be good stewards, good citizens, and enlightened voters. I especially appreciate the author's positive attitude and refreshing emphasis on the American spirit of entrepreneurship and free trade. If you are looking for a course that is up-to-date, biblically balanced, and very approachable, look no further.

Questions about regarding America's economic future. Will we slide further into recession . . . as more jobs are being shipped overseas? Is the recovery just around the bend? Can we place our trust in the promises of politicians, reporters, and Wall Street? Can we even make sense of headlines?

Hundreds of questions are resolved and sound principles forged in 15 units comprising 75 concise lessons. How did America grow so fast? Does welfare really help? Why did communism fail? What causes inflation? Should I start a business or work for someone else? What does history teach us? What do the "experts" say? What is our money really worth? What is the government's role in the economy? Are Americans truly free?

Students go even deeper as they examine God's perspective. Old and New Testament passages, as well as church history, reveal a treasure of wisdom, giving students spiritual insight and a blueprint for honest living. Bible-based economics promotes seed-planting for future generations.

This course is recommended for a semester, but it's so content-rich that I would not hesitate to work it into a full year of study. Friendly text, inspiring quotes, vintage photos, and practical activities maintain a high level of interest. The 383-page softcover main text offers practical lab assignments with current events and selective readings from the 182-page softcover companion Stewardship of God's Riches: Readings in Economics (notable essays and articles that have shaped policy through history). The optional Quiz & Exam Pack offers review questions, quizzes, tests, and answer keys.

Exploring Economics helps students build their spiritual armor as they learn to see the headlines and their world more transparently. Highly recommended! From Notgrass.

Demolishing Strongholds—DVD Curriculum

A Review by Nigel Andreola

A powerful presentation for teens and young adults! This 13-part series on four DVDs teaches Christians how to be prepared to face the false ideas of a secular world. It trains us how to question others, determine their worldview, and defend our own beliefs with conviction, logic, and ample scientific, social, and spiritual evidence.

The speakers are excellent and sometimes quite passionate. Often as many as 20 different examples and stories drill home a single point!

The production is full of illustrations, diagrams, and pictures to relieve the talking-head syndrome. It's as if the viewer is reading a comic book as the frames come to life. This is a cool approach, and good graphics are always a plus. One presenter demonstrates how to question people with video clips of him interviewing people at random.

Another speaker uses segments from popular movies and asks students to identify the worldview in them. I think this is cool, too. These programs fill me with the desire to counteract all the lies masterfully disguised as truth taught in public schools and the media.

The secular world has enormous influence, even on Christians. Demolishing Strongholds sets us on the road to making Jesus the greatest influence in our lives, so we can shine our light to dispel the blinding foundations of secularism.

A companion CD-ROM has printable study sheets in PDF format as well as a PowerPoint presentation and a promotional video. It includes a 112-page leader's guide and a reproducible 77-page student workbook. Although designed for group sessions, it would beef up any history or science course in your homeschool.

Miniatures and Morals: The Christian Novels of Jane Austen

Peter J. Leithart

New at CBD!

I'm happy to meet so many Jane Austen fans in homeschool circles. (I'm a blogger.) Have you heard about Miniatures and Morals? It's excellent. A maiden may dream of wearing a Regency gown and meeting a Mr. Knightly (Mr. Rightly), but Miss Austen's stories are far too witty to be equated with a shallow romance novel or a sentimental "goodie-goodie" tale. What she conveys through her characters is sometimes profound and at other times funny. Peter J. Leithart's insights and "thought questions" on each of her works shine an intelligent light on her Christian ethics. She writes about her world close up in miniature and "recognizes that the greatest ethical challenges come in the midst of daily life"—precisely when Christian morals, manners (and discernment), and loving our neighbor properly are needed in a variety of settings.

Spelling Power, Fourth Edition with DVD and CD-ROM

Beverly L. Adams-Gordon

A Review by Karen Andreola

One of my children had difficulty spelling. Whatever spelling book I used was a disaster. I was particularly concerned when she reached 13 and still couldn't spell well, even though she loved reading and had a wide vocabulary. I turned my attention to giving her more writing assignments. A customized spelling list was then created from the words she misspelled in her rough drafts. For example, if she misspelled "figure," I also gave her "pasture" and "nature"—words belonging to the same word family. When I found Spelling Power, I discovered I had been on the right track. Yet Spelling Power helps you go further. While reading the teacher's study guide chapters, you may even think to yourself, "It goes too far." But be encouraged. Once you've read through Adams-Gordon's detailed guide, you will be on your way to providing an excellent spelling course for all your children.

Spelling Power is a multilevel, nonconsumable course for ages 8 to adult. It can be used with all your students at the same time, year by year. A placement test determines a student's level. Five thousand of the most frequently used words are taught by phonetic principles and spelling rules. Does this sound overwhelming? It isn't when you take it a little at a time. The daily lessons can be as short as 15 minutes per child. Each student progresses at his own pace. My book had three paper clips in it that marked the place each of my children reached along the word list.

Reproducible study sheets carry a student through seven steps of studying a word. Within the steps a student is required to visualize a word in his mind and, with his eyes closed, spell it out loud. For those who like games and multisensory activities, there are over 100 of them at the back of the book. Adams-Gordon also explains how to conduct a dictation session and provides activities for learning dictionary and proofreading skills.

The companion CD-ROM features ready-to-print spelling charts, activities, puzzles, and handwriting sheets. The DVD shows the author explaining each step and real moms and students demonstrating the lessons.

Even though I am recommending this comprehensive course, I do believe we should expect less of spelling lessons in the early elementary years. Spelling is perfectly content to take a humble position in your full curriculum. Remember that spelling is a servant to higher things. Keeping the love of language alive is most important. 368 pages, softcover from Castlemoyle.

Typing Instructor for Kids Platinum on CD-ROM

A Review by

was already pretty good at the keyboard, but in order to write this review, I typed my way through all the lessons of Typing Instructor for Kids. Its systematic instruction is filled with speed and accuracy games. To my surprise, the games increased my skill! Colorful animated characters guide the child at every step. On Typer Island, the child encounters five levels (or lands). He learns finger-to-key placement in the Old West, escapes danger Under the Sea, etc. Completing the lessons and games in one land enables him to explore the next land of greater difficulty, where he plays new and more exciting games. Typing his way through all the lands, he seizes the castle and becomes king of Typer Island. The course is filled with incentives to move ahead to gain treasure. I found one of the most challenging games to be Diamond Glider. It teaches steady rhythm. WPM (words per minute) and accuracy are always monitored. New features include 10 typing plans for different age groups and two new games. Ages 7 and up. 128MB RAM, Windows 00/XP/Vista. From Individual Software.

Story Starters: Helping Children Write Like They've Never Written Before

Karen Andreola

Years ago I gave my girls a story starter. I was amazed at the results. They wrote in ways they had never written before. It was only when I gave my son a particularly exciting story starter that his creative writing, too, began to "take off." Therefore I am happy to present you with the same kind of writing exercises in this book. I sought to put the right ingredients into my story starters to inspire even the reluctant writer or the student who has experienced discouragement.

Why does a story starter work so well? Each story suspends the student in the middle of a predicament. He is then faced with the question "What happens next?" This is his cue to expand and embellish the story however he wants. He learns to write freely, with imagination and zest—and with far more boldness than he may be accustomed to.

The action-packed stories are especially appealing to boys. Thumb through the pages to choose whatever story catches your fancy. My large selection is meant to satisfy the varied interests of both boys and girls.

To spark even more curiosity, each story is illustrated with one or more engaging 19th-century pictures. The settings are sometimes intense, sometimes funny, sometimes sweetly domestic, but they always pose a challenge. Here is your child's opportunity to rescue those in danger, comfort the sick, cheer the lonely, laugh with the ridiculous, tame the wild, and do battle for good. Awaken the dormant writer in your child with this lively approach to creative writing!

Story Starters is a one-book-per-family, non-consumable, lavishly illustrated, multi-skill level supplementary English course. For grades 4 through 12—with tips so younger siblings can participate. 460 pages, softcover from Charlotte Mason Research.

Founded by Harvard-associated brothers Greg and Shawn Sabouri, Teaching Textbooks seeks to make learning math in a homeschool setting better, easier, and more affordable. Designed for independent learners, the printed materials are self-explanatory; and the CD-ROM instruction allows students to work through problems with top-notch tutors. Plain language, constant review, and flexibility are popular features of Teaching Textbooks courses.

Geometry: Teaching Textbooks

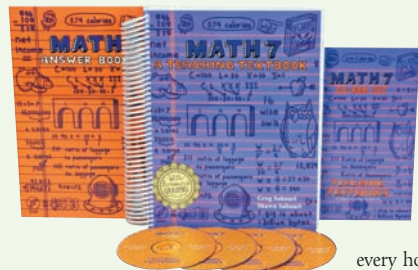

Greg Sabouri & Shawn Sabouri

"We hold these truths to be self-evident." Sound familiar? It comes straight from the study of geometry! In the opening lecture on CD, I learned that Abraham Lincoln studied geometry as an adult to help him with reasoning skills in the courtroom. More than the study of shapes and how things fit together, geometry is the development of reason itself. Geometry introduces deductive reasoning and helps students think logically to solve problems outside the classroom, just like Sherlock Holmes. Geometry: A Teaching Textbook demystifies the subject with sight and sound. Along with a clearly illustrated 768-page softcover spiralbound textbook and a 164-page softcover answer key and test bank, this course offers 110 audiovisual lessons, practice sets, and solutions to 3,500 problems on 11 colorful CDs. Pop a CD in your computer and your student will be off and running at his own pace. It is like having a personal tutor on hand to gently guide your student each step of the way. Even better, you can review any lesson when needed. No more getting stuck. A fascinating 10- to 15-minute lecture introduces the history behind and new concepts in each lesson. This is not the dry stuff of high school yesteryear; this is a course made exclusively for the 21st-century homeschool student. If your student is breaking into quadrilaterals for the first time, or needs to brush up on his polygons for the SAT and college prep, then look no further—the Sabouri brothers can help! Windows 98 or higher, Macintosh 9.0 or later.

Why "import" a math curriculum from Singapore? In a recent international study, their schools' test scores ranked first—while U.S. students finished 19th out of 38. Edited for Western readers and increasingly used in American classrooms, this innovative approach to math downplays "formula learning," relying instead on diagrams, visual models, and increasingly complex word problems to impart basic skills.

A Review by Dean Andreola

Primary Mathematics Series

Asian students have consistently scored higher than American students on international math testing. Why? Their teachers use a method that introduces concepts in a different order than U.S. schools.

They emphasize building thinking skills rather than leaning heavily on rote-memorization. Reading the introduction to Singapore Math, 1 found that the goal of the course is to guide your student to become a problem-solver, even in unfamiliar territory, and understand the why behind each newly mastered concept.

Singapore Math has created a homeschool version for American students. The easy-to-follow Home Instructor's Guide introduces new concepts (from the Textbook) and provides activities for necessary reinforcement, using simple manipulatives and games. The Textbook is a springboard for meaningful discussion between teacher and student. This discussion is basic to the course. (This is a true parent-directed curriculum. It does not rely on a pile of work sheets or hours spent in front of a monitor with a "bells and whistles"-laden computer program.) Once a concept is grasped, the student can move on to the exercises in the Workbook. These workbooks offer children a sense of accomplishment before moving to the next level: "Wow, look at the problems you mastered!" Everything is explained in a step-by-step manner with a no-rush go-at-your-own pace approach, but a weekly "suggested" schedule with objectives is offered. Singapore Math offers a free online placement test. Since the course is so reasonably priced, you can try it without a hefty financial commitment to see if it works with your learner.

Singapore Math will help you and your children face the often daunting world of "numbers" together and come out winners!

Elements of Faith, Volume 1: Faith Facts and Learning Lessons on the Periodic Table

Richard D. Duncan

Elements of Faith is unlike any chemistry book I've ever seen, bringing us closer to God as we learn from the building blocks of His creation.

This book is a comprehensive presentation of the periodic table, without feeling like one. Two pages cover each element. On the left page, you find the analysis, a short history, who discovered it, and how it is used. This data column is a handy reference. On the opposite page, we find a biblically based lesson on a theme that relates to the element, as well as a quick quiz and corresponding Bible verses.

The overall format makes the book an extraordinarily relaxed and interesting curriculum supplement. Though it is not filled with the complex formulas and mathematics you expect to see in a high school textbook, the reader learns and remembers more. I found myself telling my parents all about the properties of fluorine, for example, and how highly reactive it is.

This book complements any chemistry curriculum. I felt it was a good refresher review of what I learned in high school, presented in a clear, no-nonsense layout. Written by a professional chemical engineer, volume 1 covers hydrogen to tin. Elements of Faith helps us to "truly appreciate the incredible design, organization, and creativeness of the Creator." 136 pages, softcover.

The New Answers Books 1 & 2 Ken Ham

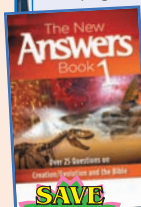

A Review by
Dean Andreola

I attended a conservative Christian college in the 1970s. The ethics teacher taught that there were no universal norms. The dean of the Bible department believed in ESP and UFOs. He hoped that there would be great discoveries in these areas that would lead mankind into deeper truth. The science department pushed a form of old earth evolution. The morals on campus were lax. If that is what it was like on a Christian campus more than 30 years ago, you can imagine what our modern secular colleges are teaching.

That's why I recommend integrating The New Answers Books 1 & 2 into your high school student's science, ethics, worldview, and elective readings. Biblically sound answers to tough questions have been carefully culled from some of the best scientists. Concise chapters cover a range of hotly debated topics. Book 1 begins with God and the credibility of the Bible; then quickly moves on to biblical responses to evolution, views on the age of the earth, Noah's ark and the flood, ETs and UFOs, fossils, death and suffering, and more—and that's just the warm-up! Book 2 goes even deeper, with more than 30 questions covering the origin of life, astronomy, the Big Bang, and the origin of evil; and even touches on ethical questions such as "How should a Christian respond to gay marriage?"

You could read dozens of other books to cover the same ground that Ken Ham has brought together in these two meaty but easy-to-understand volumes. These books will help protect our children from error, while preparing them for spiritual combat and enabling them to share and defend their faith on the campus and in the workplace. Approx. 375 pages each, softcovers.

Body of Evidence—DVDs

An appointment with a good doctor is hard to get. Even if you find an excellent physician, insurance companies won't let you spend too much time with him. Now imagine what it would be like to have him make an 8-hour house call and teach your highschoolers human anatomy!

Dr. David Menton is a creation scientist who earned his Ph.D. in cell biology, worked in research at Mayo Clinic, and teaches anatomy at Washington University School of Medicine. But he is no stuffed shirt! He is a skillful communicator who deftly defuses and simplifies a difficult subject. I appreciate his cheerful attitude and humble reverence for God as our creator.

Two teens join Dr. Menton as his students. Lectures begin at the cell and tissue level, then move forward through the skeletal, integumentary, cardiovascular, respiratory, digestive, and urinary systems, and conclude with the eyes and ears. Using his background in cell research, Dr. Menton not only tells us how the bony and squishy bits fit together, he explains how it all works. We use life-size models, diagrams, colorful microscope slides, and anything else he can lay his hands on to get his points across.

If you are looking for a highly entertaining course complete with talking kidneys, dancing spleens, and a Hollywood score . . . this isn't it. This is a serious high school course taught by a real doctor with a passion for anatomy. It requires attention to details on the part of the student. He will in turn be rewarded with a high level of recall. Each lecture is broken into two 30-minute segments to help the student better "digest" the material. The DVD Study Questions booklet is an essential. It follows along with the lectures, providing a place to write answers and observations.

When friends visited from Maine with their homeschooled daughters, I showed them one of the DVDs and waited for their appraisal. The girls were absorbed, and the mom, a physical therapist, commented that it easily approached a college-level introduction to anatomy. Body of Evidence fulfills some high school biology credits and kindles the interest of your budding brain surgeons . . . but greater still, the "evidence" points to God as our maker! Eight DVDs with two 40-minute sessions each.

Educating the WholeHearted Child, 15th Anniversary Edition

Clay Clarkson with Sally Clarkson

A Review by
Karen
Andreola

Educating the Wholehearted Child is a big book about how and why to homeschool. I suggest turning its pages with a highlighter pen in hand. The amount of practical help is astounding! All the academic subjects and fine arts are covered, while a love for God and home is the golden thread that runs throughout. As the Clarksons see it, education is about dedicated parents planting seeds, walking beside their children, and uncovering truth together.

You'll learn how to evaluate curriculum, what qualities to look for in a good book, how to set up a learning environment. One of the charts compares conventional school socialization with homeschool socialization. Sidebars include relevant quotations and easy-to-spot data—such as lists of the Clarksons' top picks of materials, tips for a dad's involvement, or a checklist for good manners.

Boxes titled "In Our House" are less formal spots where personal experiences are shared. Here I sense Sally Clarkson's feminine input. She gives you a peek at how to turn American holidays into history lessons, which literary characters the children admire, what trips they've taken and nature walks they've enjoyed, and how they've adjusted to household moves.

Mr. Clarkson has a knack for keeping the house—and everything—in ship-shape order. Do you crave structure? He coaches you on how to manage lessons with home life. You'll welcome his tools for organization and his reproducible forms.

The Clarkson family has made an important contribution to the homeschool world.

Christian Logic Resources

Nathaniel & Hans Bluedorn

If you think studying logic is going to be laborious and boring, then you haven't seen these refreshingly clever volumes written by homeschool graduates Nathaniel and Hans Bluedorn. In The Fallacy Detective, students are guided through 38 short lessons designed to help them pay attention to details, listen carefully, and recognize faulty reasoning, deception, and propaganda wherever they encounter it. Many of the examples are taken right out of the headlines of the liberal media, so the book is timely as well as practical.

Each of the 35 short lessons in The Thinking Toolbox with accompanying exercises can be completed in about 30 minutes. The beguiling illustrations—such as “The Gunfight at the O.K. Corral,” “The Moon Landing Hoax,” or a little crime drama where evidence is analyzed to catch a thief—made it difficult to keep from reading ahead to the next lesson! Some topics cleverly woven into this often-amusing text include: When is it dumb to argue? How do we use the scientific method, and what is pseudoscience? Who has a reason to lie? How do we go about analyzing evidence, sources, and opposing viewpoints, and listing reasons why we believe something? Students who master the skills of solid reasoning gain a whole lot more “common sense” than others, exercising better stewardship in making decisions, earning money, saving time, and investing resources wisely. For ages 12 to adult. Both include cartoons and answer keys. Approx. 220 pages each, softcovers from Christian Logic.

Movies As Literature

Kathryn Stout & Richard Stout

I was reading online reviews of a popular science fiction movie. The movie was highly praised by nearly 100 viewers! One lone voice, like a light in a dark place, commented that the movie, aside from its high-tech explosions, handsome actors, and strong plot, was in fact, highly immoral. Something the other folks seemed not to notice.

Movies As Literature requires little teacher prep, yet it will have a profound impact on your high school students. The 17 great films summarized in this book were specially chosen from the categories of western, mystery, drama, history, action, biography, suspense thriller, comedy, and science fiction. These films (many based on novels or plays) are well-written and directed. They feature enough character development to be good storytelling. A good story captivates the imagination and is readily recalled for narration or written essay. That premise is the basis for this biblically based study designed to improve critical-thinking and writing skills and make the student more aware of his moral compass. He becomes a constructively critical film observer—not just of the literary elements of the story, or of the acting and directing, but of the message. Sifting through the gray areas of Hollywood morality, glitz, and glamour, he learns to uncover truth through the Christian worldview. Parents will be amazed at how much more students will glean from the silver screen! What is the goal? That our children will become that one perceptive voice in a hundred!

The films are classics readily available from most video services: Shane, Arsenic and Old Lace, The Music Man, Emma, Henry V, To Kill a Mockingbird, Rear Window, Chariots of Fire, etc. Preview any film unfamiliar to you.

The student workbook provides film background and questions for discussion and composition. It includes an outline of how to write an essay. Answers to discussion questions, additional helps, and final exam are in the teacher's section. Use as a 6-month course to meet English requirements or as an elective. 335 pages, softcover from Design-A-Study.

Senior High: A Home-Designed Form+u+la, Updated Edition

Barbara Edtl Shelton

The thought of homeschooling through the high school years can put one in a tizzy. When the time drew near to teach high school, there were days when my heart beat faster. However, after spending some quiet time reading Senior High, I felt my heart rate return to normal. I am not an organized person by nature so I knew I needed this book. The first chapter is "Reinforcement for the Fainthearted," which helps the parent establish goals and find fortitude in Jesus. Another chapter reviews requirements and guidelines for graduation. The parent may choose from many kinds of reproducible planning and record-keeping sheets. Samples provided on grading criteria and course descriptions are what I valued most in the book. The grading method is a meaningful one. Because we used lots of "living" (real) books, freestyle essay writing, and life experiences in our homeschool with fewer textbooks and workbooks, I needed a way to both personalize and document our work. This book showed me how. It supplied me with both tools and spiritual encouragement. I never did feel 100 percent confident at the task of teaching high school. Nevertheless, I ventured forward much more knowledgeable and equipped than I was before. Approx. 360 pages, softcover from Homeschool Seminars.

Making Brothers and Sisters Best Friends: How to Fight the Good Fight at Home!

Sarah, Stephen & Grace Mally

A Review by
Yolanda
Andreola
Mott

When I was growing up, I got along pretty well with my brother and sister (most of the time). When my mom asked if I would like to read this book, I hesitated. A few fights between brothers and sisters are common, aren't they? Well, I opened the book and began to read. I learned that fights are common but shouldn't be accepted, because there are definite ways kids can work together to create a happier home. The brother/sisters trio of authors offers biblical truths, humorous stories, self-evaluations to help identify problems, and creative solutions that have worked for them. Their dad illustrated the book with hilarious cartoons. My favorite one depicts the way their family found "immediate harmony" on long car rides by building iron bars to separate the two children in the back seat!

Applying the important principles clearly covered in this book can help replace constant arguing with peaceful friendships among siblings and bring us closer to a "home sweet home." 271 pages, softcover from Tomorrow's Forefathers.

Accountable Kids—Basic Start-up Package

A Review by Karen Andreola

This kit is fabulous! The softcover, DVD, and reminder cards with wooden frame work together as a parenting program to guide kids to become accountable for their actions and attitudes. Mom will be less likely to nag or scold. Instead, the more peaceful way of following the "strength of habit" approach will carry the family through their chores and responsibilities.

This course rises above typical behavior modification. It is a more dignified method that considers the child to be a child of God. With Accountable Kids, the child will actually develop his willpower for doing the right thing at the right time. He learns to live with the natural consequences of his choices. By choosing well, he strengthens his will and develops self-confidence in his abilities. As the Bible points out, we reap what we sow. The program fosters a way of life that builds a foundation of Christian character, morals, and integrity that doesn't feel rigid. For example, privileges are earned and bring satisfaction and joy. Children come to see also that adults govern their lives by the same principles.

In the book, authors Scott and Traci Heaton explain how to be consistent in training with the help of individualized color-coded cards that are hung on the pegs of your child's personalized wooden frame. One set of cards and a frame are required for each student. A child with ADD can better focus on the use of the cards. It's a pleasure to record and display accomplishments on his frame.

When we think of homeschooling, we usually think of academic subjects. Learning accountability is a school subject, too, yet so vague it tends to receive more haphazard efforts. Watch the DVD introduction. Then take your time with this course. Add layers of accountability little by little for the best results. The time and consistency needed to implement this program will reap rewards for the whole family. For ages 3 to 14.

Balancing the Sword: A Comprehensive Study Guide to Life's Manual, Volumes 1 & 2

Allen B. Wolfe

I visited my sweet old Italian aunt years ago, just after she became a Christian. Over tea, we discussed the wonderful things she was learning from her Bible. My uncle Nick, irritated at this, said, "Gracie, you reada duh Bible a winsa, now forget it!" Well, here is a course designed so we won't "forget it!"

Right on the cover it states, "You must know what the Bible says before you can know what it means." That's the main focus of Balancing the Sword. These two beautifully bound volumes can take you and your family on an incredible journey through the entire Bible, gleaning deeper wisdom and inspiration directly from the pages of Scripture. Every lesson begins with a Bible reading, followed by a series of carefully crafted questions designed to test your comprehension and draw attention to vital details you may otherwise overlook. Virtually all the major points of each chapter and book are highlighted through these revealing questions, so retention is vastly improved! In addition, both volumes include thousands of cross-references, detailed antique illustrations, maps, tables, and an answer key. Ample room is provided to write in answers, as well as journal your discoveries along the way. I particularly enjoyed the many hundreds of inspiring quotes from great thinkers such as Washington, Webster, Spurgeon, and Moody on the importance of Scripture reading.

Though ideal for devotional study, Balancing the Sword is challenging enough to be used as part of your homeschool Bible curriculum or group study. It has already met with great success as a 12-credit-hour lecture course at a major university!

Balancing the Sword is one of the best spiritual armor-building tools I have seen in a long time. Learn to love God more and live right, by the Book! Approx. 1200 pages total, two hardcovers.

Starting Points: Worldview Primer

David Quine

The hour I peered inside David Quine's new worldview course was the same hour I was certain I wanted to use it with my daughter Yolanda. It looked wonderful. We already had half the course's books in our home library, and I was happy Mr. Quine had created a syllabus to bring their ideas to light. Starting Points is the syllabus—the main book that pulls together a splendid selection of living books (books alive with ideas). Starting Points is a thick book with quotes, questions, outlines, and plenty of space where the student records his notes, narrations, and essays. Mr. Quine has a remarkable way of gently guiding the student into critical thinking. Step by step, the daily assignments ease the student into examining ideas from the standpoint of the Bible—which is so very necessary for this “crooked” generation. Therefore, before you usher in a weightier worldview course, I highly recommend using this enjoyable and empowering one to start.

From the supplemental materials list, Paul Little's book provides an overview of the basic doctrines of historical Christianity. Three stories from The Chronicles of Narnia invite thinking along allegorical lines. The student goes on to make a comparison of the humanist and biblical perspective of man's sinful nature with the help of The Deadliest Monster, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, and Frankenstein. The Christian foundations of American history round out the course. Upon completion, the student receives three credits (Bible, Literature, History).

SAVE $5

No answer key is needed. As Yolanda's teacher, I familiarized myself with the books so that when I read over her answers and essays, I could see that she had understood the “gist” of it. Those students accustomed to putting what they read in their own words (by Charlotte Mason's marvelously practical method of narration) will be the most comfortable with Starting Points. Yet students new to this essay-style of writing will be helped by Mr. Quine's leading questions. They will apply themselves without feeling overwhelmed. And they will work diligently without tedium.

What a joy it was to hear Yolanda confess, “It is one of the best courses I've ever taken.”

For junior high or high school. 480 pages, softcover from Cornerstone Curriculum.

A Review by Dean Andreola

Whatever Happened to Penny Candy? Sixth Edition

Richard J. Maybury

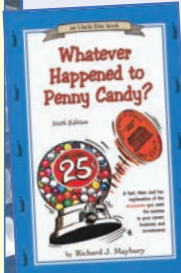

Have you ever wondered what caused the Great Depression? Do you know the true value of a dollar? Can you explain to your children in layman's terms about inflation and recession? I couldn't until I began reading Whatever Happened to Penny Candy?, the foundational book in this eye-opening series on the history of economics, ethics, and law. Although I read it in just two brief sittings, I couldn't stop talking about it. I even ordered extra copies for family and friends.

Financial expert Richard Maybury has taken the mystery and stuffiness out of this important topic so that even a 12-year-old will begin to grasp the significance of sound economic principles and how these principles in turn can better govern individuals and nations! These books should become core curriculum for every student who aspires for success in citizenship and financial independence.

Our Lord Jesus teaches a great deal about time and money and how they should be wisely saved, invested, and spent. His lessons on economy also reveal deeper truths about our spiritual condition and the condition of the world in which we live. If history repeats itself, then the traps of personal and global financial ruin are visible and can be avoided if one knows the signs.

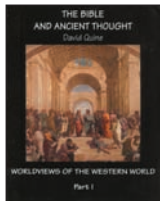

Sometimes the greatest lessons we learn come from the experience and heartfelt wisdom of others. Your children will benefit from “Uncle Eric's” books long after they leave your nest and begin building nests of their own! Truly a worthwhile investment. Recommended for grades 9 and up. (Can be read aloud for younger grades.) 190 pages, softcover.

The Bible and Ancient Thought, Year 1 Syllabus: Worldviews of the Western World

David Quine

In a postmodern society growing with disillusionment, it's critical that Christian students develop a persuasive biblical worldview and learn to defend it logically. Focusing on seven disciplines—philosophy/theology, literature, art, music, economics, science, and government—this yearlong study compares scriptural teaching with Greco-Roman thought; considers the grandeur of Christianity during the Renaissance and Reformation; and examines the Revolutionary Age. 640 pages, softcover from Cornerstone Curriculum.

World Physical Geography, Revised and Updated: Welcome to the Wonderful World of Geography

A Review by Dean Andreola

Brenda Runkle

Have you been looking for a basic yet thorough geography course—one with an emphasis on gaining knowledge via critical thinking, rather than simply memorizing names and places? I found one! It's Brenda Runkle's World Physical Geography. Short, uncomplicated lessons give the student a sense of accomplishment. The author speaks directly to the student in an engaging, unstuffy way, relating true stories, fun facts, and current events from around the world. I like the focus on the practical use of Earth's natural resources for energy, navigation, technology, farming, etc.; and man's constant striving to conquer the environment. For example, we learn that Israel uses and conserves water more efficiently than any other nation! These factual tidbits add to the readability of topics like Earth and the solar system; how to use maps; latitude and climate; time zones; the center of the earth; mountains and volcanoes; oceans, rivers, and lakes; land masses; travel routes; the atmosphere; and the weather. Simple hands-on activities do not require trips to the library or even the hardware store! The text provides all the beautiful full-color maps, photos, and charts you will need. It even includes lesson review questions, vocabulary, and a glossary of terms. With three or four lessons per chapter, you don't have to do geography every day of the week. We review lessons orally, but tests can be photocopied from the teacher's guide. Overall this is a well-designed, thoughtful study that will challenge your children without confusing them—and no political or Mother Earth views are expressed in the text. Produced on high-quality paper, it should survive many years of use in your homeschool! For grades 6 and up. Student book: 288 pages, softcover. Teacher's guide: 135 pages, softcover

Eat Your Way Around the World

Jamie Aramini

I've always liked the idea of sharing an international meal at the end of a study in geography. Whether it's with just your family or with a house full of friends, the children can present their geography research in word, song, artwork, or costume. Eat Your Way Around the World will help you with the food. The recipes are arranged by continent and represent the most popular dishes for each country. My favorites are tasty Italian minestrone soup and Indian chicken curry. But I've also served French onion soup, New Zealand kiwis, and English cucumber sandwiches and scones. Among the recipes are insights into dining etiquette. In France bread is served on the tablecloth and usually not buttered. Food facts are also sprinkled throughout. After instructions on how to grow a South American pineapple, you can read that this fruit was brought to Europe by Christopher Columbus in 1493 and became a symbol of hospitality. Cut and staple together the book's authentic-looking passport and each child will have a place to collect the seals from the different countries studied. 111 pages, spiralbound softcover from Geography Matters.

Sketches from Church History

S.M. Houghton

Imagine for a moment what it would be like to meet one of the early Christians. What would you ask them? What could you learn from them? How might your life be changed by the experience?

Far from being a dusty old textbook, Sketches from Church History is similar to a personal time machine. It allows you brief yet poignant visits with that "cloud of witnesses" that, by God's grace, have shaped, defended, and sustained the Church, often at the cost of their lives.

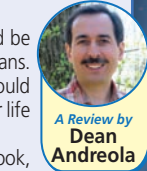

English scholar Sidney Houghton tells their story. He skillfully weaves period quotes, letters, artwork, and photos into his narrative. For example, Anne Askew was the daughter of a knight in Henry the VIII's court. At age 25, she was tried for heresy. You can read this moving story, and learn of her fate from her own words taken from the trial.

But I will not leave you with the impression that Church History is all about martyrs. It is also the story of heroes great and small, of sweeping reform, and the joyful spread of God's Kingdom like wildfire across the nations. It is the faith-affirming story of God's goodness and mercy.

Fifty short chapters cover the Early Church and Martyrs, the Roman Church and Papacy, Islam, the Middle Ages, the Crusades, the Protestant Reformation of England and Europe, revival in North America, the rise of modern missions, and more. All this in less than 260 pages!

The student workbook will turn these stories into a high school-level course with a syllabus, questions and answers, charts, timelines, maps, puzzles, essay topics, and more. And don't forget the value of lively discussion.

The Old Testament church often forgot her history with disastrous results. May that history not be our history. 256 pages, softcover from Banner of Truth.

Draw and Write Through History Series

Carylee Gressman

Once enlightened by the "notebook method," a teacher will often be inspired to go the extra mile to use it. Leaving the history workbook on the shelf, she leads her children to carefully create their own books. Each notebook of drawings and writing becomes a record of the student's knowledge—a knowledge that is personal and retentive. To make his own page (rather than fill in another's) uses his brain more expansively. An excellent resource for the keeper of such a notebook is Draw and Write Through History. Opening the pages of the Middle Ages volume, you'll see step-by-step colored-pencil demonstrations on how to draw a stone castle, an archer, a princess, a knight in armor, a catapult, a green dragon, a falcon, and more. A sample page of writing (in cursive) gives an overview of the time period and can be used for copywork. But the majority of a student's notebook writing needs to come from the narration of his schoolbooks. Makes an excellent supplement to any history curriculum or unit study! For ages 8 and up. Approx. 62 pages each, softcovers from CPR Publishing.

Never Before in History

Gary Amos & Richard Gardiner

I graduated from a New Jersey public high school in the 1970s—leaving my U.S. history course with the vague sense that religion had a slight influence on America's founding. The extent to which Christianity was a central and pervasive force in the development of this country was hush-hush. I understood the typical and curt point: People came to the colonies for religious reasons; the end. Yet these religious reasons also embodied the ideas that helped form our government.

Most students are taught that Greek, Roman, Renaissance, and Enlightenment sources figured equally in America's development. The Christian contribution is remarkably understated. A closer look at our nation's past reveals that Christianity had significant and vibrant things to say about justice, politics, social order, science, rights, law, reason, etc.—and, indeed, permeated every aspect of life in colonial times. This book shows that “the political principles enshrined in our Founding documents can be directly traced” to the Christian beliefs of the Founders.

Never Before in History finished off our American history studies beautifully. With its presentation of ideas, I meant to give my children not a vague understanding of our beginnings but an accurate and richer one. (Note: Students using David Quine's Starting Points write a host of essays using this book.) 213 pages, hardcover from Foundation for Thought and Ethics.

Daughters of the Faith Series

Wendy Lawton

I've read three stories from the Daughters of the Faith series, and I want to read them all. A stack of them rests by my bedside. Wendy Lawton weaves the threads of her storytelling wonderfully. At the start of each book, Mrs. Lawton makes me familiar with the personality of her main character—always a girl—about whom I very soon found myself caring. Each girl lives in quite a different setting, yet each contributes spiritual encouragement to my life.

A Review by Karen Andrea

Anita Dittman, who survives the Holocaust in Germany; blind Mary Bunyan, who is a help to her father, John Bunyan, a prisoner in England; and Pocahontas, a friend to John Smith in Jamestown—all placed a sparkle of hope in my heart. Yes, deeds of faith do exist. Throughout history and current times, girls have stepped out of their comfort zone in their desire to know God, to please Him, to trust Him, and to live righteously.

Nourish your daughters' souls with these stories based on the lives of real girls. What they will absorb from the pages of the Daughters of the Faith series will be far more edifying entertainment than the pages of a shallow romance novel. I wish this inspiring collection was in print when my daughters were young. Approx. 155 pages each, softcovers from Moody.

The Peleg Chronicles

Matthew Christian Harding

A Review by Nigel Andreola

Like gnarled roots of an old tree, these stories twist and turn, entangling you in anticipation to see how they all unwind.

Imagine the earth shortly after the time the people of Babel were scattered. Matthew Harding has re-created these exciting and dangerous times in his three adventure novels. The story follows the heroic adventures of a handful of God-fearing men and children. These often funny and endearing characters show us what can be accomplished when you learn to overcome your fears and walk in faith. They need God's grace and supernatural intervention as they defend the helpless and battle dragons, giants, hyenas, strange creatures, evil pagan priests, and slave-traders.

The books read like fantasy novels, yet without magic spells, wands, and flying broomsticks. Instead, Scripture and prayer are revealed as the powerful tools needed to overcome the works of those who obey the evil one; to offer hope to our heroes in desperate times; and to give them boldness to share their faith along the way. God's redemptive power is also plainly evident when even a sworn enemy can turn to the one true God.

At 250 pages each, with easy-reading type, the novels are short enough for family read-aloud time. A thrilling cliffhanger ends each story, so be sure to read them in order.

Maybe these "magic-free" character-building, God-honoring novels will start a new trend. . . . I hope so! For preteen readers and older. Softcovers, from Zoe and Sozo Publishing.

Hitty: Her First Hundred Years

have an antique doll. She's lovely—her hair is flax, and she wears her original dress and petticoat. But a girl doesn't have to have a special interest in dolls to be enthralled by Hitty, the "autobiography" of a doll whittled by a Maine peddler sometime during the early 19th century. Hitty's adventures are what you'll find so interesting. And there are a lot of them! Near the beginning of her life, she is carried aboard a whaling vessel in the arms of the captain's daughter, shipwrecked, marooned on an island, recovered, then dropped for lost in India, picked up by a snake charmer, and purchased by a missionary family. (Phew!) She returns to America, lives with Quakers in Philadelphia, and meets John Greenleaf Whittier during the War Between the States. After being forgotten in a dark attic stuffed between the cushions of an old sofa, she is shipped to New York City with the furniture. Here, in the arms of another little girl, she meets Charles Dickens. The story continues as Hitty is stolen, hidden away, given away, and thrown away. Yet she is always happy when admired and when a new dress lovingly takes the place of an older, shabby one.

Writing in 1929 before the popularity of television (and political correctness), author Rachel Field beautifully describes the geographical and historical settings through the words of a doll who takes courage, even when she doesn't feel so brave, in life's uncertain circumstances.

A Newbery Medal winner for ages 8 to 12. 207 pages, hardcover from Simon & Schuster.

Considering God's Creation, Sixth Edition—2 Volumes with CD

Susan Mortimer & Betty Smith

A Review by
Karen Andreola

Are you looking for a Christian guide to natural science that can be used by a big family (or group) of students of different grade levels? Would you welcome a course that attempts to rid you of any guilt you might have for not using a typical textbook? If so, I recommend Considering God's Creation. This program focuses on observing and investigating the natural world, integrating science with the Bible. It comes with a Teacher's Manual, a Student Notebook, and a CD.

The Teacher's Manual starts off each lesson with an introduction to the topic, preparation instructions, pertinent vocabulary, a song or poem (included on the CD), a Bible reading, a Student Notebook activity, review, and a "Digging Deeper" suggestion. Topics include the universe (stars, planets, Earth and its atmosphere); weather; rocks and minerals; the plant and animal kingdoms; human anatomy; and more. The Student Notebook features crafts and exercises that enhance the lesson. These enjoyable cut-and-paste activities include sorting through a pile of paper bones and pasting them on the corresponding creatures, or making a frog life-cycle booklet, for example.

The program also suggests that students keep a supplemental notebook, to record information and discoveries, and to store some of the completed activity pages. I like the idea of keeping a notebook. It is a refreshing replacement for the usual multiple-choice sorts of activities found in the textbook/workbook grind. I would suggest, however, that younger students tell little narrations on what they are learning and that older students include written narrations in their notebooks.

Incorporating books from your personal library or public library makes this course complete. Used this way, the topics will provide enough thorough study for two years. For grades 2 to 7. Older students are directed to dig deeper using Lyrical Life Science, the Moody Science videos, and other excellent resources. Each child should have his own Student Notebook and supplemental notebook. Some common household materials are needed for the activities. Authors Mrs. Mortimer and Mrs. Smith are two enthusiastic homeschooling mothers who designed the course for fellow homeschoolers. Teacher's Manual: 112 pages, softcover. Student Notebook: 270 perforated reproducible pages, softcover. From Eagle's Wings.

Biology 101: Biology According to the Days of Creation—DVDs

Award-winning filmmaker and homeschool dad Wes Olson introduces a biblically ordered biology program reverently based on the six days of God's creation. The DVD lessons are brimming with life, action, humor, and the colorful great outdoors. The rapid and witty tour covers defining life and classification, plants, aquatic and avian creatures, land animals, mankind, and genetics with a brief history of cells, DNA, etc. The DVD segments are recommended for high school, but are entertaining enough to be enjoyed by the whole family. I especially appreciated hearing his sobering thoughts on the ethics of human cloning.

A Review by
Dean Andreola

A 114-page study guide (on disc 4) accompanies the film segments and is not without more of Mr. Olson's light humor. He obviously enjoys his subject. The guide includes quizzes.

Living book enthusiasts will be happy they found this course. Why? Much of the student's reading will come from the books he finds in the local library. Mr. Olson recognizes the value of biographies and juvenile picture books because they present details on each of the categories of living things. The 27-week accreditation booklet (also on disc 4) is a guide for weekly activities and all the library book reading the student does throughout the school year that he gets credit for.

Karen tells me she remembers rummaging the shelves of the local libraries, wherever we lived, for the same kind of books with a science theme. Carrying home "new" books from the library periodically brought fresh anticipation into the homeschool. Older students can be required to pull books off the shelves that blend well with their lessons, books that satisfy any particular interest. The freedom to do this picking and pulling invites greater involvement in the learning process. Four DVDs, 4½ hours total.

Signs & Seasons: Understanding the Elements of Classical Astronomy

Jay Ryan

Have you ever looked up at the sky and wondered why God made so many stars? In school we often learn how far away the stars are; that the sun is a great ball of nuclear fusion; and that Mars looks red because of the iron oxide in its rocks. Most of what we hear about in the "scientific" news is regarding grand theories like the big bang or cosmic strings. Yet, from the beginning of time to a little over a hundred years ago, nobody would have thought of the stars as pointless! Genesis 1:14 says: "And God said, Let there be lights in the expanse of the heavens to separate the day from the night. And let them be for signs and for seasons and for days and years."

Jay Ryan, a former editor of Sky and Telescope magazine, now teaches homeschoolers how to use the sky as God intended. This method even has a cool name: Sky

Craft. Students saturate their minds with the constellations and their practical applications, such as timekeeping and navigation. The author takes a visual approach to what he says is a "visual" science. He fills his pages with more than 400 simple illustrations of what can be seen with the naked eye. Not only does he teach you about classical astronomy and Sky Craft, but he also teaches the history of this wondrous science.

Numerous biblical passages and quotes from the great minds of the ancient world (Geminus, Cicero, Macrobius, and Aratus) fit seamlessly into the lessons. The 40 pages of field activities have step-by-step detailed instruction. Though intended for junior high and high school science credit, the book can be used by the whole family or as a gift for any stargazer. Book is 262 pages, hardcover; field journal and test manual is 192 pages, softcover. From Fourth Day Press.

Our Created Solar System: What You Aren't Being Told About Astronomy, Volume 1—DVD

If "the heavens declare the glory of God," then it is certainly worth a trip to the heavens! Your family's host for this space voyage is Spike Psarris, former engineer in the United States military space program.

A Review by Dean Andreola

He began his career as an atheist, but research into the origins of the solar system brought him to Christ.

This museum-quality DVD offers some of the freshest and most compelling evidence for young-earth creationism your family will ever see. I had my notepad ready to jot down a few memorable quotes from the convenient onscreen text and summaries, till I realized I was simply transcribing it word for word. It's that good!

You will visit each planet and its moons and learn what modern science knows about it. Considering the evolutionists' very own talking points, you will be shocked to find just how much they don't know about the planets and their origins. Since hard science clearly supports creation, evolutionists make up elaborate stories to explain away their unsupported theories. For example, science fact (as evolutionists see it) tells them that Neptune should be twice as old as the solar system. It also tells them that much of the solar system should not exist at all. Yet, here we are! Then how do they account for these planets apart from Creator God?

Mr. Psarris enlightens us with hundreds of NASA photos, movies, animations, and examples taken right out of the headlines of the world's most prestigious science journals. His logical arguments for biblical creation are so crystal clear that even young children will glean much from a single viewing. Since the DVD offers chapter divisions, I recommend follow-up lessons focusing on one planet per lesson, allowing time for narration and discussion. Your children will learn that even the fiery volcanoes of distant Io and the tail of a lonely comet can speak to the glory of our God! I can't wait for Volume 2. 106 minutes.

The Quarter Mile Math Series on CD-ROM

Many students have benefited from the whimsical bit of change and challenge that the Quarter Mile math software is like our old-fashioned flash cards updated for the 21st century! It covers all the basic math disciplines, keyboarding, the alphabet, rounding, whole numbers, fractions, decimals and percents, math strategies and estimations, integers, and equations in the form of an exciting race with sound effects. The software keeps records of previous score times so your child can track improvement from game to game. Building confidence and improving speed in problem solving are just a few of the benefits of this self-directed program designed to complement and enhance your current curriculum. Depending on which "bundle" you select (according to grade or ability), one game will cover a range of students in your household. Works with a PC or Mac and is simple to use—very little adult supervision is necessary once the basics of the game are mastered. Windows 98/00/XP/Vista/7 or Macintosh 8.X to OS X Classic.

Multiplication Memorizer Kit

Arthur Bornstein

A Review by Karen
Andreola

Arthur Bornstein created a memory system decades ago. The illustrations on his materials are outdated and from that era (1970s bellbottom jeans, etc.). Yet when I am asked, "How did you teach your children to memorize their multiplication facts?" I put on a smile, because I found what worked for us. These silly, overly simplistic, kooky, cartooned flash cards gave my children definite associations between numbers to hold in their imaginations and later bring to mind with a clue from me.

To start, I showed my children a picture card depicting a football game. Using the notes for the teacher on the back of the card, I read, "Picture a football field with team 9 against team 5 playing on the 45-yard line." Just before supper for review, I tested for this fact by way of a piece of scrap paper with "9 x 5" on it. I asked, "Team 9 and team 5 played on which yard line?" The next morning I presented the next card and that afternoon tested for both facts. After some weeks of adding facts gradually and testing daily, my children could write answers to a whole column of facts placed in any order with only the occasional silly clue for association from me.

Before using Mr. Bornstein's memory technique, they had experienced months of trouble trying to memorize by rote alone, and I was perturbed. Now years later, if you ask any of my adult children, "Team 9 and team 5 played on what yard line?" they would probably respond with "45" and a smile.

Professor in a Box Financial Accounting Course

Michael P. Licata, Ph.D.

A Review by
Dean
Andreola

It's true! The most successful businesses in America have owners and CEOs with accounting backgrounds. Great entrepreneurial ideas are not enough. Even small home businesses need to be funded and managed by people who have a good understanding of the numbers. Sound and ethical accounting is a formula for long-term success. This first accounting course for homeschool high school students has been developed by an award-winning accounting professor and veteran homeschool dad!

Q. What makes this introductory accounting course so different?

A. Professor Licata has completely done away with the dreaded 400-page textbook and replaced it with meaty, yet easy-to-follow, flash lectures; teacher's notes; and printable slides on DVDs.

Your student follows four simple steps for success:

Watch the lectures; Complete the homework problems; Check the solutions; Take the exams. That's it!

In fact, any high school student with basic math (algebra) skills can handle it, yet it is equivalent to a college freshman course. The 12 chapters can be covered in a more intensive college semester format at two lessons per week, or over an entire school year at one lesson per week. The syllabus even allows for a "short" version of the course to lighten the workload. Yet, even the "short version" still covers the necessary content to prepare a student to take the CLEP Financial Accounting Exam!

Someday your students may be entering the world of business. This course better prepares them with a foundation in good financial practice. They will use these newly learned skills for day-to-day management, banking, forecasting, and making sound investments. Any student interested in accounting, management, business, or self-employment will benefit from this course. There is even a discussion on career opportunities and requirements for becoming a CPA.

Now more than ever, we need honest, level-headed, smart stewards in the fields of business and finance to help our nation along the road to economic recovery. I believe God is preparing a generation of specially trained men and women to meet this need. Professor in a Box Financial Accounting will help plant your students' feet firmly on that road. Includes a course syllabus.

Learn to Cook and Sew... with a Home Economics Course
Christian Light Education

A Review by Karen Andreola

Academics have become so much the focus in a girl's high school life that many a girl graduates without knowing how to make an evening meal or use a needle to sew on a button. I was one of these girls. Happily, I married a man who was gracious at the supper table (most of the time). He couldn't help laughing at my cooking sometimes. I remember one particularly heavy round loaf of bread that he curled up in his arm like a discus ready to be thrown across a field at a track meet. It was funny. However, he laughed louder than I did.

Many homeschooling mothers strive to give their daughters a well-rounded liberal arts education. At the same time, they understand the value of training their daughters to be homemakers. If you are looking for an inexpensive course in home economics, consider this one published by Mennonite believers. The art of godly homemaking is one of their specialties.

Ten consumable worktexts comprise this curriculum. I'm not partial to worktexts but with these the student does more than read and fill in the blanks. She is directed to take part in the hands-on learning opportunities, to practice the skills being taught. The first section of the course covers food preparation, basic nutrition, smart shopping, and hospitality. Next, in gentle steps, the student gets ready to sew; she is introduced to the sewing machine, is taught how to follow a sewing pattern, and then masters the details of making clothing. There is a section on child development and caring for children. I disagree with only a few points of doctrine presented in the material. Overall, I believe the entire course, but especially the last section, is a wonderful complement to my revised edition of Beautiful Girlhood. The last section offers guidance in becoming a godly woman—a woman of inner beauty. It encourages a girl to seek wisdom, to grow spiritually and have a closer relationship with God. Friendships, modesty, singlehood, and Christian courtship are also briefly discussed. This is the kind of practical help so many of us would have liked to have before we were married. Approx. 60–70 pages each, 10 softcovers

Before I Was Born, Revised: God's Design for Sex Series

Carolyn Nystrom

"Let purity have the first word," I read some years back. I agreed with the importance of this. Yes, it would be best for my children to form a strong first impression of the facts of life, sweetly, positively, and without shame. This picture book had the script and illustrations I was looking for. It beautifully presents God's special plan for one man and one woman to be married, love each other (in some ways, privately), and bring forth children. There are no warnings of promiscuity here, no disease education, and no indication of anything perverse to beware of. Purity all alone, by itself, has the first word. Later, when children see or hear what is off God's path, they will recognize it distinctly as "not good."

How does a boy's body change into a man's or a girl's body change into a woman's? What do these bodies look like? A few pages show us. An outdoor scene of boys swimming and jumping into a water hole in the nude gives us an idea, as does a man bathing in a waterfall. A young woman, in Eve-like calm, wades in a grassy-edged pond with a family of swans. These watercolor paintings portray a softer anatomy. Apart from the delivery of a baby from the vantage point of the doctor, much of the book shows people as we see them normally—with clothes on.

I felt awkward presenting this delicate subject to my girls, yet with Before I Was Born, I took courage. When each one's time came, they read it silently. Questions were answered.

One of the reasons I chose to homeschool was to shelter my children and let them experience innocent joys of childhood. In the public arena, children younger and younger are given orientation into the worldly culture that surrounds us. I find this upsetting. I would keep this book tucked away for junior high students, but it could be used (if necessity requires it) with younger children. 40 pages, softcover from NavPress.
