Dear Friend,

One of the most decisive moments in the Synoptic Gospels takes place when Jesus turns to his disciples and asks, "But who do you say that I am?" It is a simple question that has spawned vigorous and sometimes heated debate since Jesus first posed it more than 2,000 years ago. From the birth of the church to present day, believers and non-believers alike have wrestled with matters such as the incarnation, Jesus' life and work, his death and resurrection, and the relationship between his human and divine natures. Ancient as well as contemporary explorations of Christology have influenced the ways we understand theology, ethics, pastoral ministry, preaching, and the daily practice of the Christian faith.

In this latest Academic Resources catalog, you'll find several studies that will aid you in reflecting more deeply on Jesus' core question. In Christobiography: Memories, History, and the Reliability of the Gospels, Craig Keener views the canonical gospels as ancient biographies in order to understand what the genre can tell us about Jesus from a first-century perspective (this page). Mark Strauss's video lecture series Four Portraits, One Jesus delves into the question "Who was Jesus of Nazareth?" (page 22). In Jesus the Spirit Baptizer, Frank Macchia probes the fundamental connection between the person of Christ and the Holy Spirit (page 28). Finally, Stephen Wellum's God the Son Incarnate offers a systematic summary of Christology from a philosophical, biblical, and historical viewpoint (page 31).

In addition to these volumes, you'll also find references on biblical studies, apologetics, world religions, Pauline studies, church history, theology, language study, archaeology, and other topics.
