On Devonshire Shores Series

The gray cloudy morning felt as dreary as Claire Summers's heart as she looked out Aunt Agnes's bedroom window. For two years, following her father's last wishes, Claire has lived in exile as a companion in Scotland to her cantankerous old aunt. When Aunt Agnes suddenly dies, leaving Claire without a home or income, Claire answers a Sidmouth boarding house advertisement for a "respectable female partner." She's drawn to the handsome proprietor, but will he discover her sordid past? And, as Claire's sisters rally together to find their sibling, will The Seaside Homecoming heal old wounds or widen the divide?

Undaunted Courage Series

When Detective Jack Tucker interviews Lindsey, the beautiful chef and sole witness to a high-profile murder, he approaches with a healthy dose of suspicion—because the enemy left no evidence. But the more he learns, the more Jack believes the killer's targeting more than Lindsey's sanity. He's after her life.

A trauma survivor, Lindsey hasn't recovered from the last ordeal that nearly killed her. But when she recognizes Jack from that incident, sparks fly . . . even if he doesn't remember her. Can she trust him with her life?

As these two strong-willed people combine forces, can they decipher who's undermining her credibility before they're pushed Over the Edge? Approx. 370 pages each, softcovers from Revell.

I Think I Was Murdered

Six months ago, at the pinnacle of her career in an AI chatbot startup, Katrina's world combusted—her adoring husband died in a fiery auto accident, her CEO was indicted, the feds interrogated her then locked her out of her office, and her beloved grandmother passed away.

Since then, Katrina has used her prized possession, the beta prototype for a new, ultra-sophisticated AI chatbot, to talk to her dead husband, Jason. Communication with the bot wields the power of making Katrina imagine he's still alive. Even the syntax and word choices sound like Jason.

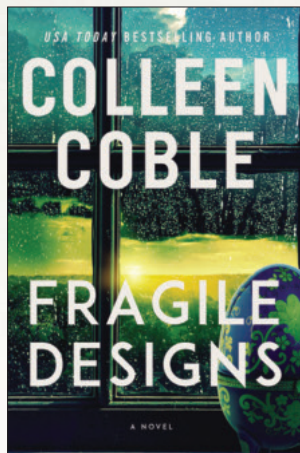

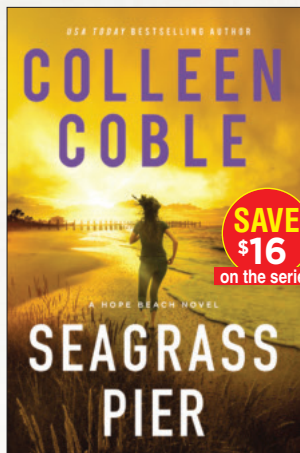

On one particularly rough day, she asks Jason's bot to tell her something she doesn't know. When a message flashes, "I think I was murdered," Katrina's distress has her fleeing to her cozy Norwegian-flavored hometown in northern California. There she enlists the help of Seb, a longtime acquaintance, to uncover the truth.

But navigating grief, family dynamics, second chances, and technology's complexity prove more challenging than anticipated. And suddenly staying alive is becoming more difficult than either of them ever imagined. . . . 352 pages, softcover from Nelson.

Veteran hostage negotiator Carrington Reed has spearheaded plenty of white-knuckle negotiations during her career. Still, her heart races when she's called by U.S. Border Patrol to a Lethal Standoff involving 17 men, women, and children trapped at gunpoint. Every confrontation is different—and this one has the potential to be especially deadly.

Barricaded inside a vacant house, the rifle-wielding Kendrix brothers are demanding justice for their Texas rancher father, believed killed by an undocumented worker. Enraged, they're targeting all migrants, but they may have a secret secondary motive as well.

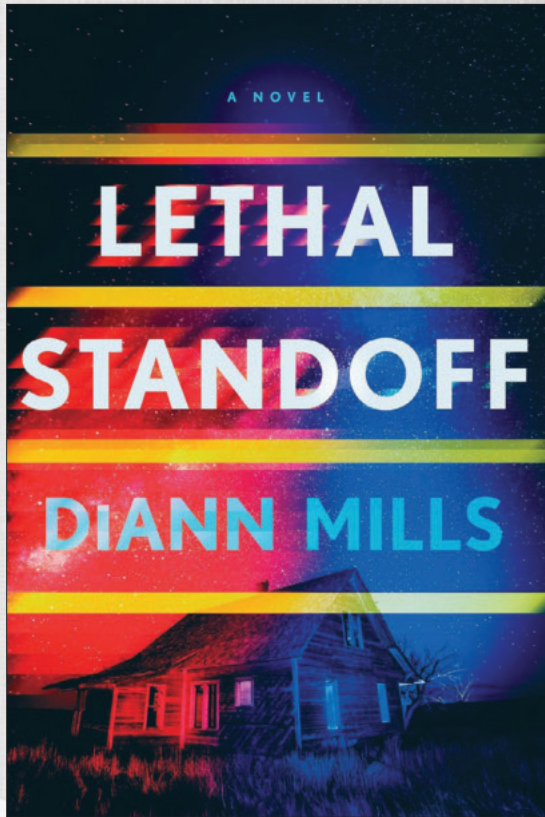

Also on the scene: handsome investigative reporter Levi Ehrlich. He's covered Carrington's work before—and neither he nor Carrington can ignore their admiration for one another. But today, Levi's after one thing: an attention-getting headline. Carrington's laser-focused on saving lives. And as she digs deeper, she's noticing some details aren't adding up. Working together, can they defuse the situation before it detonates? 348 pages, softcover from Tyndale.

Texas Ever After Series

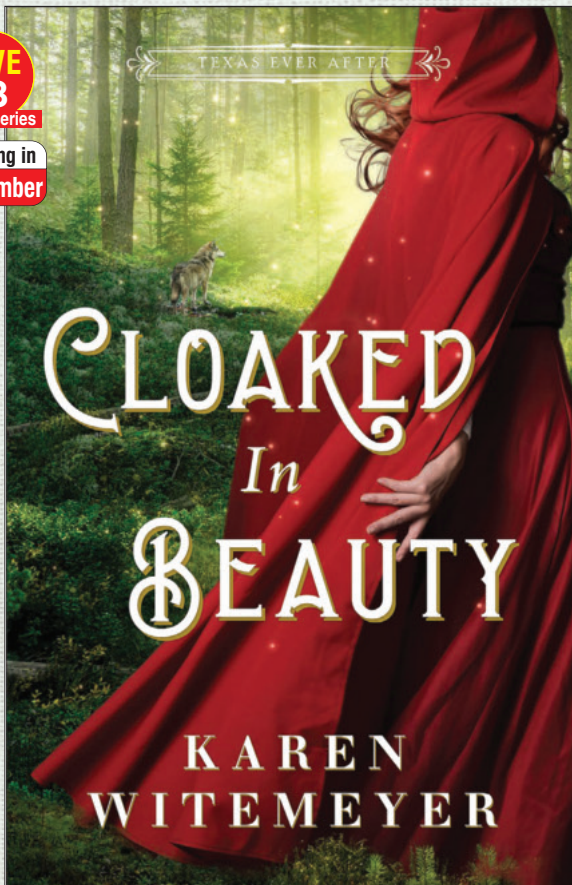

Scarlet Radcliffe awoke to the smell of smoke. A dragon must be downstairs breathing fire over her family estate! But Scarlet soon discovered there was no dragon, just a mysterious “devil man” her mother’s maid spoke of before hurrying Scarlet off in a carriage.

For 15 years, she has lived as Lettie Hood, Cloaked in Beauty, hiding in her grandmother’s cottage in the secluded Piney Woods of Texas. She’s about to turn 21 and come into her inheritance, making her one of the wealthiest women in the state, but her plotting uncle will stop at nothing to get his claws on her money—even if it means murder.

Her mother hires “lone wolf” Philip Carmichael, the only Pinkerton agent she trusts, to bring the heiress back to Houston safely. As Lettie and Philip travel together on a long, dangerous journey, Philip finds she’s not the spoiled girl he was expecting, but a young woman full of kindness and rare strength. As Lettie’s resilience wins Philip’s admiration, will their growing feelings for each other become their greatest weakness or will new love conquer all? So Into You Brittany Branch is a talented artist with an immensely popular YouTube channel where she teaches lessons. She’s also a 28-year-old who’s still living with her mother. And given the severe social anxiety she experiences every time she leaves the house, Britt wonders if she’ll ever have the courage to move out. Then her best friend announces she’s getting married, and Britt decides it’s time for some changes.

For a long time, Hunter Pickett skated by with his good looks, sports talent, and wealthy parents. The former party boy is now a man in his third year of sobriety. But his life sometimes feels aimless. Facing insomnia one night, he discovers Britt’s channel. He’s not interested in art—at first—but something about her leaves him inexplicably calm, and he messages her. To his amazement, Britt responds, and before long, they’re chatting every day.

When the digital duo discover they live in the same city, they begin a spark-filled “IRL” friendship. But they’re both hiding secrets. Will opposites attract? Or will the truth catch up when they least expect it? 336 pages, softcover from Nelson.

On Sale! Unforgotten

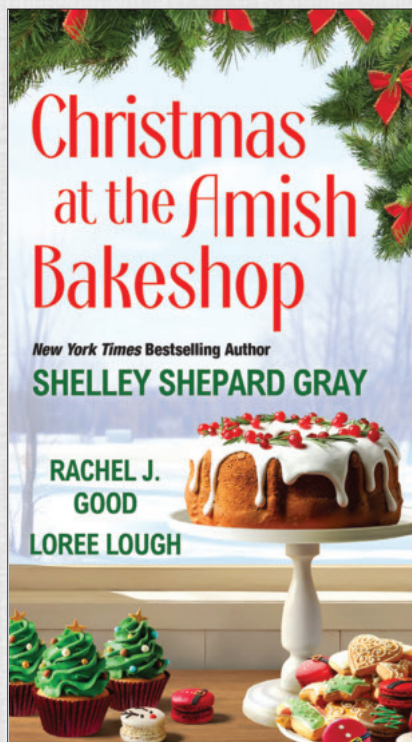

Bethanne Hostetler and Candace Evans are cousins—but you’d never guess it to look at them. Bethanne is Amish, bookish, and wears a white kapp—whereas Candace is English, looks amazing in a pageant gown, and has just been crowned “Miss Crittenden County” at the local fair!

The cousins share one misfortune, however: being targeted by stalkers. Bethanne’s ordeal was seven years ago, and the lingering trauma complicates everything . . . especially her relationship with Jay, her would-be suitor. Candace’s nightmare is unfolding now. At first, the odd blue-eyed stranger trailing Candace is just a face in a crowd—one who keeps showing up at her public events and leering. Then, things take a darker turn. She begins receiving creepy messages from unknown numbers. She discovers she’s being secretly photographed.

As Candace’s stalker becomes bolder, Officer Ryan Mulany is tasked to be her escort. He’s new in town, so he doesn’t mind the assignment. Traveling with “Miss Crittenden County” will help him get familiar with the area. And while he knows he should only think of Candace as a job, the more time they spend together, the more protective he feels.

The clock is ticking. Can Ryan save Candace from impending disaster? 304 pages, softcover from Revell.

The Christmas Tree Farm

The McDowell Family Christmas Tree Farm has never seen such hard times. After Madison's grandmother passed away, a wildfire left nothing but ash on a large part of their property. As Madison, who's been away teaching English in Mongolia, walks through the rubble that was once healthy pines, she can't help but think of her failed relationship with Trevor, a fellow teacher whom she left behind overseas.

She wants to start over with her sister Addie, who is surprised to see Madison as she walks in door of their old family farmhouse. But Addie, who's picked up the pieces in Madison's absence, wants to sell the family business. Madison, whose mind is full of the beautiful memories they made with their grandparents each summer, wants to fight to keep it. To make matters even more complicated, their neighbor, and Madison's high school crush, now-widowed Gavin Thompson wants to turn his hazelnut farm into a dirt bike track for his daughter.

Madison will have to work hard to sow the seeds of success with so much against her. Despite all the difficulties, can she restore her relationship with her sister, and give the farm—and love—a second chance? 176 pages, hardcover from Revell.

Waiting for Christmas

As a wealthy heiress, Addy doesn't regret marrying Howard for love, especially with the forthcoming prospect of a quieter Christmas. Even though she adores her modest limestone house in quiet Manhattan, her previous life hadn't prepared her for burnt toast, walking home on blustery November days, and managing a household without help. When she acquires a seasoned housekeeper, life seems too good to be true!

Only one month after her wedding, on the way home from a suffrage meeting, the cold winds carry in change when Addy discovers an eight-year-old boy, Jack, with short, raggedy hair and wind-reddened cheeks, hiding in the bushes near her front steps. She's aware some children sleep on the streets in other parts of New York, but not their quaint neighborhood.

After Jack explains he escaped from the orphanage to find his three-year-old sister and father who will return on a ship around Christmas, Addy and Howard work tirelessly to solve the riddle of Jack's missing family. And Addy's eyes quickly open to a world entirely different from her privileged past—one that holds both challenges and possibilities.

While the couple's search yields more questions, the wonder of Christmas surrounds them. Will they recognize the most miraculous gift of all? 304 pages, hardcover from Tyndale.

The Wish Book Christmas

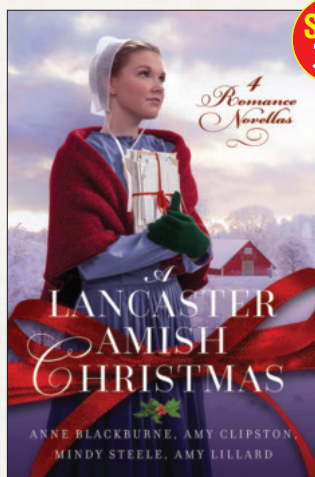

Best friends Audrey and Eve are looking forward to celebrating Christmas in postwar America, thrilled for the opportunity to create new traditions with their 5-year-old sons. But when the annual Christmas catalog arrives and Bobby and Harry start obsessing over all the toys, the two friends realize they need to teach their children the true significance of the holiday. Maybe such an important lesson can be wrapped in creativity and festive fun. . . .

Audrey and Eve help the boys brainstorm ideas for thoughtful gifts of encouragement for people in the community. But where to start? Well, since a dog topped the boys' wish list for Santa, what better way to begin than by walking an elderly neighbor's yellow lab!

As the celebration of Christ's birth draws closer and Audrey and Eve work their way through the acts of service with the boys, can their own hearts find healing from the tragedies of war and soften to the possibility of forgiveness and hope—and perhaps even new love? 304 pages, hardcover from Tyndale.

SARAH LOUDIN THOMAS
These Tangled Threads

Award-winning author Thomas weaves a tale of the glamorous Biltmore Estate and the people who work behind the scenes in this page-turning novel of second chances. She effortlessly pulls her reader into the glittering yet homespun world of Asheville, North Carolina, in 1923. Master weaver Lorna Blankenship must try to repair broken friendships to save her job—and to help create Cornelia Vanderbilt's wedding dress. A beautifully sewn-together story of complicated relationships, artistry, and new beginnings for old friends.

Spanning decades, this gripping novel unfolds quickly, revealing a haunting story that will keep readers up all night. Wingate expertly crafts characters who are layered, intriguing, tragic, and as resilient as the Oklahoma wilderness they occupy. In 1909, 11-year-old Olive Radley, sensing her stepfather's dark intentions, knows she must run away with Choctaw girl Nessa. In 1990, park ranger Valerie Boren-Odell searches for a troubled teen missing in the forest and encounters a long-hidden burial site. A mysterious tale of survival and the pioneering women, almost a century apart, who are strong enough to brave the brutal land—and the secrets it's hiding.

Twenty years ago, the construction of a dam caused some residents of Pearl Springs to lose their land to eminent domain. Newly arrived back in her hometown, deputy Jenna Hart soon learns that those wounds have not exactly healed with time, and someone is holding a vindictive grudge. When a killer fixated on Deadly Revenge begins to target city officials, rocking the once-sleepy community, Jenna enlists handsome FBI agent Maxwell Anderson for backup.

Jenna and Max used to work together in the Chattanooga Police Department where sparks of attraction ignited between them. Now, with the former mayor of Pearl Springs running for U.S. Senate, they must work together to track down a powerful foe before a big political rally puts the mayor's life and the lives of hundreds of civilians at risk.

As romance heats up their professional relationship, another suspect comes into play, forcing the two law enforcement agents to dive even deeper into the tangled web of their investigation—and call on all their skills to stay alive.
